PERMIT REQUIREMENTS: Under the provisions of IC 22-14-4-4 (a), an explosive magazine permit is required to maintain any of the following five types of magazines:

Type 1 - A permanent structure such as a building, igloo, tunnel or dugout.

Type 2 - A portable or mobile structure, such as a skid magazine, trailer or semitrailer.

Type 3 - A "Daybox" or other portable magazine.

Type 4 - A permanent, portable or mobile structure such as a building, igloo, box, semitrailer, or other mobile container none of which must be bullet resistant.

Type 5 - A permanent, portable, or mobile structure such as a building, igloo, box, bin, tank, semitrailer, bulk trailer, tank trailer, bulk truck, tank truck, or other mobile container none of which must be bullet resistant.

The permit requirement applies to each person who stores a regulated explosive, each person who has control over a regulated explosive and each person who has control over a place where a regulated explosive is stored. Operation of an explosive magazine by a person described above without an explosives magazine permit constitutes a class "C" infraction.

EXCEPTION: Explosives magazines used in connection with analytical laboratories or laboratories operated by a college, university, school or educational entity for the purpose of instruction or research, are exempt from the permit requirements of this section. However, such laboratories must be approved by the office of the State Fire Marshal under the alternate criteria for explosive magazines as established in the Indiana Fire Prevention Code.

PERMIT, EXPIRATION DATES: All permits issued due to the above requirements expire one (1) year after they are issued. The permit is limited to storage of the types and maximum quantities of explosives specified in the permit in the place covered by the permit and under the construction and location requirements specified in the rules of the Commission.

DOCUMENTS REQUIRED FOR FILING: 1. Two copies of the "Application For Permit Pertaining To Explosive Magazine." (Furnished by the State Fire Marshal Office.)
2. A site plan showing the distance that the affected magazine is located from the nearest highway, railway and structure, that are also used as places of habitation or assembly other than the manufacture of explosives.
3. All other pertinent information as required by the State Fire Marshal Office.
